*T*he National Association of Government Labor Officials (NAGLO) is a professional association consisting of the chief official in each state and territory of the United States responsible for overseeing laws that protect and serve working men and women throughout the nation.

NAGLO encourages communication across state lines and provides state labor commissioners the opportunity to meet and speak with their peers across the country.

NAGLO also represents the states at the federal level by working with the Federal Department of Labor on various labor policy issues that impact state labor regulations and laws.
